KEVIN'S KORNER

On November 24, most of us will sit down to a feast. Somewhere, at somebody's table, we'll enjoy the presence of family and friends, and the satisfaction of food in abundance. There will be no shortage of conversation, companionship, and casseroles. Our plates will be filled with food, and hopefully our hearts with gratitude. From there, the abundance flows into the days that follow, with leftovers distributed among all the guests.

This surplus of food seems like such a contrast to the "daily bread" that our Lord tells us to pray for. In the prayer he gave us, Jesus says that we should desire the coming of God's reign, on earth as it is in heaven. Then, after this petition for the coming of the kingdom, we begin to shift from focusing primarily on God in heaven to focusing on how we live on earth below. We ask for God's perfect justice to arrive and for his will to be fully enacted in this realm that we inhabit. This leads us into the prayer's next petition: "Give us today our daily bread."

In first-century Galilee, where Jesus lived and ministered, poverty was widespread and visible. Some scholars estimate that 90 percent of people lived close to the subsistence level or below it. So here was a Savior who lived in daily solidarity with the poor, and who brought the reality of the kingdom into their lives, including provision for their physical needs. Through Jesus, it was clear that the Father in heaven was attentive to and responsive to their hunger.

Author Eugene Peterson tells about a couple named Fred and Cheryl who adopted a five-year-old child named Addie from Haiti. They already had two sons by birth, ages 15 and 13. After returning from Haiti to their home in Arizona, the family sat down for their first supper together. As Peterson puts it,

There was a platter of pork chops and a bowl of mashed potatoes on the table. After the first serving, the two teenage boys kept refilling their plates. Soon the pork chops had disappeared and the potatoes were gone. Addie had never seen so much food on one table in her whole life. Her eyes were big as she watched her new brothers, Thatcher and Graham, satisfy their ravenous teenage appetites.

Fred and Cheryl noticed that Addie had become very quiet and realized that something was wrong—agitation ... bewilderment ... insecurity? Cheryl guessed that it was the disappearing food. She suspected that because Addie had grown up hungry, when food was gone from the table she might be thinking that it would be a day or more before there was more to eat.

Having guessed right, Cheryl took Addie's hand and led her around to various spots in the kitchen—the bread drawer, the refrigerator, the freezer, the pantry—to help reassure her that there was plenty of food in the house, and that no matter how much her teenage brothers ate it, there was more where that came from. According to Peterson, "It was enough. Food was there, whether she could see it or not. Her brothers were no longer rivals at the table. She was home. She would never go hungry again."*

"Give us this day our daily bread." Having prayed for the coming of God's kingdom, we then express our complete reliance on him, and our responsibility for practicing his kingdom when it comes to something as basic as nourishment, especially the nourishment of others. Remember that like the other parts of the Lord's Prayer, this one is primarily about we, not simply me. "Give us this day our daily bread." There's no scarcity when it comes to God's resources. The shortage lies in our anxiety, our sense of self-sufficiency, our greed, and our excess. So praying for our daily bread helps move us away from competitiveness and toward community. It keeps us turned outward toward the Father and our fellow human beings, particularly those who hunger.

Don't let a full stomach lead you into complacency about the individuals in our community, our nation, and our world who struggle to get consistent access to enough food. Instead, use the holidays as a time to examine your own appetites and your patterns of consumption. Hunger, though often hidden, is widespread, and there are multiple ways that you can exhibit the kingdom by helping feed others, through donations, volunteer opportunities, and community action. So during this season of feasting, seize the opportunities you're given to help put food on somebody else's table.

May "Give us this day our daily bread" be both our prayer and our practice.

Faithfully,

Pastor Kevin

MINDY'S PEACE

It's November again. Turkey and gravy time. Even though I try to be thankful every day, Thanksgiving always reminds me to think about being even more thankful.

H is for the hand of God that touched my heart.

A is for His acceptance, even though I was a sinner

N is for the nourishment, not just the kind you eat.

K is for the kindness shown to everyone.

S is for Savior, that is what He is to me.

By Mindy Adams

November 11th is Veterans Day. So to all who have served or are serving our country, THANK YOU!

December 2022 – Christmas is just around the corner. Decorations, lights, parties, and gifts; so much to do, so little time to do it in. I already know that the greatest gift God gave us was His Son. But did you know the second greatest gift is life itself?

God gave us a purpose and a reason for being here. He loves us one and all. The time we spend with our family and friends is precious. We never know when one life will end or another will begin. Loved ones can be taken from us in a blink of an eye or a new life enters the world when least expected. So enjoy Christmas and don't forget to thank God for the greatest gift of all, Jesus.

Happy Birthday Jesus.
